Storyline 'Parched': Set in the heart of the desert of Rajasthan, India, the story revolves around the lives of three families. The men are troubled by the daily routine of existence, and an aspect of it comes to the fore in the form of the girl child, who is forced to marry early and spend long years in the barren desert, never seeing her husband. The girl child represents the cruel reality of living in the desert. One such girl child is seen hiding in a very desperate situation, not daring to reveal her identity to anyone. She is identified and married off to a man in the family of the girl's parents. She faces life with alacrity and lives the real life. But in fact she is isolated. She is not made to understand the intricacies of the desert life and how she is able to survive. Her existence is her husband's sole prerogative. Her only solace is to have a child of her own. This struggle of existence for the women is the basic theme of the story. The three families go through a constant struggle to stay alive and to survive in this desert. The desert also brings changes in them, in a way, it shapes their lives and the girl child becomes an important part of the three families. According to the film director, the movie focuses on a "girl child" and "an ordinary girl's life."
